The other guests of the ceremony were half a dozen intimate friends.

Then the regular program began.

Just after the Katinka number Miss Morgan made a short address telling of the work of the American committee, and then she turned to the French words, thanking the American people, and Miss Morgan particularly, for all the committee had done to aid France in her great emergency.

After the Katinka number Miss Morgan made a short address telling of the work of the American committee, and then she turned to the French words, thanking the American people, and Miss Morgan particularly, for all the committee had done to aid France in her great emergency.

Among the incidents of the evening was the presentation to Marshal Joffre by Mr. Finley of a gold medal given to the city of Boston by France in honor of George Washington, which was shown on a piece of wood brought from Mount Vernon.

All the quaint remarks of Mr. Bartlett, producer of the play, between the different acts, were in French in compliment to the guest of honor. Just as the wooden soldiers came on the scene he said in French, "Marshal, may I ask you to pass in review my army," which was greeted with much applause. There was wild enthusiasm when the Boy Scouts appeared on the stage bearing an American flag, it being the one that was used in the Eiffel Tower in Paris when the United States entered the war.
